Selangor yet to decide on new water tariff

SHAH ALAM: The new water tariff rate in Selangor has yet to be decided as the state government is waiting for feedback from the federal government, said Menteri Besar Datuk Seri Amirudin Shari. He said Selangor could not act "alone" as any change or adjustment to tariffs would be made by the federal government, which would also involve other states. However, he said, among the key negotiations that should be focused on were to ensure sustainable water supply and the ability of the companies involved to maintain the facilities. "Discussions (on new tariff rates) have been going on for years. Whether it is the time now (to announce the new rates) or otherwise, we are reaching that decision and will announce it in the future," he said. Bernama
