WWF PRAISES SABAH'S CONSERVATION EFFORTS

KOTA KINABALU: WWF-Malaysia has given Sabah the thumbs up for its efforts at wildlife conservation despite the spate of elephant deaths this year.

Its conservation director, Henry Chan, said Sabah was on the right track and it is a world leader in terms of conservation.

"Sabah has a policy to turn 30% of its land as protected areas, having all forest reserves and oil palm plantations certified according to the requirements of the Roundtable on Sustainable Palm Oil," EMI reported.

He said 26% of state land was currently gazetted as protected areas.
